

Cautionary Advice on Internet Trading

Dear Investor,

Greetings from SMIFS LIMITED (formerly known as Stewart & Mackertich Wealth Management Limited) and thank you for being our valued client.

SEBI and Stock Exchanges, as market regulators are always keeping a vigilance check on suspicious activities and looking to punish money swindlers. Yet, a little awareness and alertness on your part can go a long way in keeping your investments safe.

Internet trading has rapidly become the default trading platform for most Investors as it is simple, convenient and transparent to use. One can execute transactions at the click of a button, operate their trading account, bank account and Demat account from anywhere and can have full control and knowledge of the transaction being executed.

Some key precautionary measures one should take note while trading through Internet:

- 1. Password is the key to unlock your financial profile. So, it is advisable to never share your Internet Based Trading, Mobile Trading and Back Office Password with anyone, as it could result in unauthorized trades and losses.
- 2. Be cautious of where you are accessing your trading account from. It is advisable to never access your trading account from computers that you are unfamiliar with. Remember to keep your laptop Password protected and Firewall enabled to prevent unauthorized access to your data.
- 3. Ensure to use an Antivirus updated to latest version which shall protect by detecting Malware that might get into your laptop while unattended.
- 4. Never forget to close your trading session when you are off the desk.

Take a few moments to secure your investment before you walk away.

Remember. It's always better to be safe than sorry!

Assuring you best of our services.
